A. DIRECTORY OF REPORTING PROGRAMS

Listed in this directory are the 949 programs from which we received "promotion questionnaires" in our study. Other evidence suggests that these represent about half of all lifelong learning programs in the country. They are generally the larger programs, and institutions of higher education outnumber school districts.

Pertinent information about each institution appears in parentheses following its address. The format is:

(institution size & type / courses / degrees)

Under "institution size & type" there are:

Small (Sm)	High schools (HS)
Medium (Med)	Junior colleges (JC)
Large (Lg)	Public colleges/universities (Pub 4C)
	Private colleges/universities (Pri 4C)

The size key is:

	High schools	Colleges/universities
Small	< 25,000	< 10,000
Medium	25,001-50,000	10,001-25,000
Large	50,001 +	25,001 +

These enrollments pertain to the entire school district and the entire college or university, not only the adult and continuing education programs.

Course levels include:

Pre-high school basic education (ABE)

High school (HS)

Junior college (JC)

Four-year college and beyond (4C)

Degrees include:

High school diploma (HS)

Associate degree (A)

Bachelor's degree (B)

Master's degree (M)

Doctorate (D)

Other, chiefly certificate of completion (Oth)

The directory is organized by state. Within each state, public school systems are reported first, followed by colleges and universities.

B. STATISTICAL TABLES

These tables closely follow the order of questions in the two questionnaires that appear as appendices to Volume 1, Final Report and Summary. Tables describing the content of the adult or continuing education programs appear first, followed by tables describing the organization and thrust of promotion activities.

Each question is tabulated against the eight groups of institutions that we felt had to be kept apart -- small and large school districts, junior colleges, public colleges/universities, and private colleges/universities. The number of institutions in each group is given in parentheses.

Whereas the directory lists "small," "medium," and "large" institutions, we found there were insufficient "medium" and "large" cases for separate tabulation. Therefore the "large" category in the tables contains both "medium" and "large" institutions as presented in the directory. The dividing line between small and large is thus 25,000 in the case of school districts and 10,000 in the case of junior colleges, four-year colleges and universities.

Most tables report the percentage of institutions in each category that made a particular response on the questionnaires. In Table 1, for example, 80 per cent of the small public school districts responded that they offer adult basic education, versus only 2 per cent of the small private colleges/universities.

Some tables report median values. In questions where the response was a continuous variable, such as size of staff or number of dollars, medians were computed. More often than not, responses to these questions were too skewed for reliable means to be computed. The median, less affected by skewness, was chosen instead. In Table 6, for example, the median adult/continuing education faculty size reported by small public school districts is 64, versus 174 for large public school districts.

The symbol "--" in some tables indicates that, because of missing data, there were insufficient cases to provide a stable value.
